Description

It is a dream of every budding engineer to make it big in the corporate IT world. This book is designed to guide and empower the budding engineers to achieve their much cherished dream. Since it is the interview process where the employability of the budding engineer is judged, therefore, keeping this aspect in mind, the first chapter is designed to guide the budding engineer to the most basic aspects of the interview process, and how meticulously they should plan and prepare for the interview. Further, majority of the IT companies don't expect that the budding engineers should be well equipped with the advanced techniques/technologies, but must have strong foundation in the basics and concepts of the concerned subjects. In addition, they should be able to demonstrate the burning desire to excel and passion to learn. Keeping these aspects in mind, subsequent six chapters are designed to impart basic knowledge of the important topics through frequently asked questions in each topic. Any budding engineer, who can master about 70-75% questions covered in the book can crack technical round of any IT company with a bang.
